keymacro (stands for "Key Macro", and it is basically a new keyboard macro) is a utility designed to help you type faster by associating with itself all the keys on your keyboard. What is it and why do you need it? Sometimes, some keys or buttons on your keyboard have a tendency to repeat themselves, such as the "e" key. In this case, you just have to select a macro on your keyboard and the process will be automatic, provided that you have associated with this key that particular macro you need. However, if you are more selective, you can also choose a key (or several keys at once) and associate a more complex macro. In this case, you need to have some understanding about keyboard macros. First, a keyboard macro is a group of keystrokes (or keys) that you have chosen to be repeated, for instance "Ctrl X" (with Windows). This group of keystrokes is mapped to a specific function. Second, you can trigger your macro manually (and that's the reason why you need the program in the first place) or you can create a macro so that it triggers by itself (and that's the reason why you need this program). The program is made in such a way that you can create your own macros by just clicking on a key, and you can select the function of that key when you are prompted. Advanced features Using the macro editor, you can create and edit macros without being limited to your keyboard. You can create macros for the first time or you can change existing ones, for instance. You can select from all the available keys (by pressing the Spacebar) and you can edit the text that will be inserted at the time of each pressing. You can also edit or create your own keys by replacing them with text (like any standard text editor). Even though you can create a macro to associate with any key, you can also choose from those that are displayed on the main toolbar or you can create your own. This is an interesting feature as you can create a macro on one hand and use it on the other. First of all, you must associate a macro with a key. You can associate it with a key on the main toolbar or with a new key, which you can create. After that, you will be prompted to select the desired macro. This can be the entire standard macro or you can select from those available on your keyboard (like pressing "C 81e310abff
